PhD in Sociological Sciences, the Head of the Editorial and Publishing
Department and Chairwoman of the Trade Union Council

Ra'no Azizova is a PhD in Sociological Sciences currently serving as the Head of the Editorial and Publishing Department and Chairwoman of the Trade Union Council at the Tashkent State University of Uzbek Language and Literature. In these roles, she leads the university's publishing activities, ensuring the production of high-quality academic and educational materials that reflect the institution's scholarly standards and cultural values. Her responsibilities also include overseeing editorial processes, coordinating academic publications, and promoting the dissemination of scientific research within and beyond the university.

As the Chairwoman of the Trade Union Council, Dr. Azizova plays a vital role in safeguarding the rights and interests of faculty and staff. She is committed to fostering a supportive and inclusive environment that encourages professional growth, well-being, and equal opportunities for all members of the university community. Her leadership in the council also focuses on promoting gender equality, social dialogue, and collective engagement. Beyond her administrative duties, Dr. Azizova actively advocates for the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), particularly SDG 5 (Gender Equality) and SDG 12 across all university divisions.

She promotes initiatives that empower women and advance sustainable practices within the academic setting. Through various workshops and awareness campaigns, she encourages eco-friendly behaviors, resource efficiency, and a culture of social responsibility among students and faculty.

Her scholarly work, including her dissertation on the social factors influencing family stability in Uzbekistan, highlights her deep commitment to understanding and addressing key societal issues.

By integrating sustainability, equality, and social progress into her academic and administrative activities, Dr. Azizova continues to contribute meaningfully to the development of a progressive and inclusive academic environment.
